

Document: Fellows v. Superior Court, 108 Cal. App. 3d 55

Fellows v. Superior Court, 108 Cal. App. 3d 55

Copy Citation

Court of Appeal of California, Second Appellate District, Division One

July 10, 1980

Civ. No. 59179

Reporter

108 Cal. App. 3d 55 * | 166 Cal. Rptr. 274  | 1980 Cal. App. LEXIS 2030 ***

ALICE FELLOWS et al., Petitioners, v. THE SUPERIOR COURT OF LOS ANGELES COUNTY, Respondent;
ALLSTATE INSURANCE COMPANY et al., Real Parties in Interest

Disposition: [\[1\]](#) Let a peremptory writ issue directing respondent court to vacate and set aside the subject order and proceed in accordance with the views expressed in this opinion.

Core Terms

attorney's, work-product, documents, work product, disclosure, trial court, conditional, discovery, interrogatories, plaintiffs', preparation, privileged, waive, attorney's work product, subsequent litigation, civil action, termination, deposition, holder of the privilege, former attorney, immune, uninsured motorist claim, real party in interest, in camera, set forth, lawyer-client, belongs

Case Summary

Procedural Posture

Petitioner injured parties sought a writ of prohibition to respondent Superior Court of Los Angeles County to review an order compelling further answers to interrogatories in an uninsured motorist action. Respondent ordered petitioners to produce documents containing attorney's work product and ruled that the attorney's work product privilege, Cal. Civ. Proc. Code § 2016\(b\), was not applicable.

Overview

Petitioner injured parties filed suit against defendant insurer, the real party in interest in the action. Petitioners' suit alleged breach of contract, bad faith, fraud, and deceit arising out of defendant's failure to pay uninsured motorist claims. Defendant sought to discover information contained in legal files relating to the uninsured motorist claims. Petitioners claimed that the information was protected by the attorney's work-product privilege, Cal. Civ. Proc. Code § 2016\(b\). Respondent superior court ruled that the privilege was not applicable because the work-product was prepared for matters that had been concluded prior to the current litigation. Petitioners sought a writ of prohibition against respondent, and the court issued the writ, directing respondent to vacate its order. The court ordered respondent to conduct an in camera review of the materials for which privilege was claimed to determine whether the privilege was absolute, conditional, or not applicable. The court held that § 2016\(b\) applied the attorney's work-product privilege absolutely to writings that reflected an attorney's impressions, conclusions, opinions or legal research or theories.

Outcome

The court issued a writ of prohibition to respondent superior court on behalf of petitioner injured parties. The court ordered respondent to conduct an in camera review of materials to determine the validity of petitioners' claims that the attorney's work-product privilege applied to materials that defendant insurer sought to discover.

▼ LexisNexis® Headnotes

Civil Procedure > Attorneys ▼ > General Overview ▼

Civil Procedure > ... > Privileged Communications ▼ >  Work Product Doctrine ▼ > General Overview ▼

HN1 Civil Procedure, Attorneys

The attorney's work-product privilege, Cal. Civ. Proc. Code § 2016\(b\), \(g\), survives the termination of the litigation or matter in which the work product is prepared and may be claimed in subsequent litigation -- whether related or unrelated to the prior matter -- to preclude disclosure of the attorney's work product. The continuance of the attorney's work-product privilege for subsequent litigation applies both to work product which falls within the conditional portion of the privilege and to work product which falls within the absolute portion of the privilege. More like this Headnote

Shepardize - Narrow by this Headnote

Civil Procedure > ... > Privileged Communications ▼ >  Work Product Doctrine ▼ > Opinion Work Product ▼

Civil Procedure > ... > Privileged Communications ▼ >  Work Product Doctrine ▼ > General Overview ▼

HN2 Work Product Doctrine, Opinion Work Product

Work product which falls within the absolute portion of the privilege -- opinion work product, which consists of an attorney's mental impressions, conclusions, opinions or legal theories -- is precluded from disclosure in subsequent litigation just as if such opinion work product had been created expressly in preparation for the subsequent litigation. More like this Headnote

Shepardize - Narrow by this Headnote

Civil Procedure > ... > Privileged Communications ▼ >  Work Product Doctrine ▼ > General Overview ▼

Evidence > Privileges ▼ >  Attorney-Client Privilege ▼ >  Scope ▼

Civil Procedure > Attorneys ▼ > General Overview ▼

Evidence > Privileges ▼ >  Attorney-Client Privilege ▼ > General Overview ▼

Legal Ethics > Client Relations ▼ > Duties to Client ▼ >  Duty of Confidentiality ▼

HN3 Privileged Communications, Work Product Doctrine

In the absence of the attorney, the client has standing to assert the attorney's work-product privilege on behalf of the attorney, the only holder of the privilege. More like this Headnote

Shepardize - Narrow by this Headnote

Civil Procedure > ... > Privileged Communications ▼ >  Work Product Doctrine ▼ >
Waiver of Protections ▼

Legal Ethics > Client Relations ▼ > Duties to Client ▼ >  Duty of Confidentiality ▼

Civil Procedure > ... > Privileged Communications ▼ >  Work Product Doctrine ▼ >
General Overview ▼

HN4 Work Product Doctrine, Waiver of Protections

Since the attorney's work-product privilege belongs to the attorney, the attorney may waive it.

More like this Headnote

Shepardize - Narrow by this Headnote

Civil Procedure > ... > Privileged Communications ▼ >  Work Product Doctrine ▼ >
General Overview ▼

Evidence > Burdens of Proof ▼ > Initial Burden of Persuasion ▼

Legal Ethics > Client Relations ▼ > Duties to Client ▼ >  Duty of Confidentiality ▼

HN5 Privileged Communications, Work Product Doctrine

The party claiming the attorney's work-product privilege has the initial burden of establishing that the matter sought to be disclosed comes within the concept of an attorney's work product. But the party seeking disclosure has the burden of establishing that a denial of disclosure will (1) unfairly prejudice him in preparing his claim or defense, or (2) result in an injustice. The judge must weigh the evidence presented to support such a contention against any evidence to support the competing interest of protecting the attorney who claims the privilege for his efforts and industry in trial preparation. More like this Headnote

Shepardize - Narrow by this Headnote

Civil Procedure > Attorneys ▼ > General Overview ▼

Legal Ethics > Client Relations ▼ > Duties to Client ▼ >  Duty of Confidentiality ▼

Civil Procedure > ... > Discovery ▼ > Privileged Communications ▼ > General Overview ▼

Civil Procedure > ... > Privileged Communications ▼ >  Work Product Doctrine ▼ >

General Overview ▼

HN6 Civil Procedure, Attorneys

The work product of an attorney is immune from discovery under any circumstances if such work product consists of a writing that reflects an attorney's impressions, conclusions, opinions, or legal research or theories. Cal. Civ. Proc. Code § 2016\(b\). More like this Headnote

Shepardize - Narrow by this Headnote

Civil Procedure > ... > Privileged Communications ▼ >  Work Product Doctrine ▼ >

General Overview ▼

Legal Ethics > Client Relations ▼ > Duties to Client ▼ >  Duty of Confidentiality ▼

Civil Procedure > Attorneys ▼ > General Overview ▼

Civil Procedure > ... > Discovery ▼ > Privileged Communications ▼ > General Overview ▼

HN7 Privileged Communications, Work Product Doctrine

A document comes within the "absolute" portion of the attorney's work-product privilege if it consists of a writing that reflects an attorney's impressions, conclusions, opinions or legal research or theories. Cal. Civ. Proc. Code § 2016\(b\). Such a writing shall not be discoverable under any circumstances. The language of § 2016\(b\) is clear and explicit. It offers no opportunity for compromise or variation. There is no authorization for the court to weigh or balance any competing interests between the party seeking disclosure and the party resisting disclosure. Invocation of the attorney's work-product privilege with respect to such a document precludes discovery since such a document is protected absolutely from disclosure by the attorney's work-product privilege. More like this Headnote

Shepardize - Narrow by this Headnote

Civil Procedure > ... > Privileged Communications ▼ >  Work Product Doctrine ▼ >

General Overview ▼

Legal Ethics > Client Relations ▼ > Duties to Client ▼ >  Duty of Confidentiality ▼

HN8 Privileged Communications, Work Product Doctrine

A document comes within the "conditional" portion of the attorney's work-product privilege if the document meets the definition of "work product" for this privilege but is not a writing that reflects the attorney's impressions, conclusions, opinions, or legal research or theories. An attorney's "conditional" work product consists of material that is of a derivative or interpretative nature such as diagrams, charts, audit reports of books, papers, or records, and findings, opinions and reports of experts employed by an attorney to analyze evidentiary material. More like this Headnote

Shepardize - Narrow by this Headnote

Civil Procedure > ... > Privileged Communications ▼ >  Work Product Doctrine ▼ >

General Overview ▼

HN9 Privileged Communications, Work Product Doctrine

Material that is considered of a non-derivative or non-interpretative nature and that is evidentiary in character does not constitute the attorney's work product. More like this Headnote

Shepardize - Narrow by this Headnote

Civil Procedure > ... > Privileged Communications ▼ >  Work Product Doctrine ▼ >

General Overview ▼

HN10 Privileged Communications, Work Product Doctrine

Major categories of non-derivative evidentiary material excluded from the concept of an attorney's work product include (1) the identity or location of evidentiary matter, such as material objects; (2) material objects themselves that constitute admissible evidence; (3) information about prospective or potential witnesses, such as their names, phone numbers, addresses, and occupations; and (4) written or recorded statements of prospective witnesses. More like this Headnote

Shepardize - Narrow by this Headnote

Civil Procedure > ... > Privileged Communications ▼ >  Work Product Doctrine ▼ >

General Overview ▼

Civil Procedure > ... > Discovery ▼ > Privileged Communications ▼ > General Overview ▼

HN11 Privileged Communications, Work Product Doctrine

If the trial court determines that certain documents come within the conditional portion of the attorney's work-product privilege, it must then hold that such documents are protected by the privilege and are immune from disclosure unless the court determines that a denial of disclosure (1) will unfairly prejudice the party seeking disclosure in preparing its case, or (2) will result in an injustice. More like this Headnote

Shepardize - Narrow by this Headnote

▼ Headnotes/Syllabus

Summary

CALIFORNIA OFFICIAL REPORTS SUMMARY

In an action by persons injured in an automobile accident against an automobile insurance company seeking damages arising out of the insurer's alleged failure to settle their uninsured motorist claims, the trial court ordered plaintiffs to produce, in response to the insurer's discovery efforts, all documents from their former attorney's file as to which their sole objection was based on the attorney work-product rule. The attorney had represented plaintiffs in their initial dispute with the insurer which had resulted in a decision by an arbitrator. The court based its ruling on the ground that the privilege is not applicable to litigation which is subsequent to the completion of the matter with respect to which the work-product privilege is claimed.

On plaintiffs' petition, the Court of Appeal ordered issuance of a peremptory writ of prohibition directing the trial court to vacate and set aside its order and proceed in accordance with the views expressed in the opinion. The court held that the policies behind the creation of the work-product privilege, i.e., encouraging the attorney to make a thorough preparation for trial, including analysis of unfavorable aspects of his case, as well as favorable aspects, and preventing one attorney from taking undue advantage of another's industry and efforts, have equal validity in support of the principle that the privilege should not be held to terminate simply because the litigation or matter in which the attorney's work product was created has come to an end. It further held that the privilege may be claimed by the client although it belongs to the attorney, and that it was not waived by plaintiffs as clients being in possession of their attorney's file or by the bringing of the civil action. Rejecting a contention that the trial court's order could be sustained on the basis that plaintiffs had failed to make a showing of preliminary facts to establish that the privilege applied to the documents in question, the court pointed out that the trial court had made no such determination, and it held that it was necessary that the trial court make an in camera inspection of the documents to determine which documents, if any, did not fall within the concept of "work product" for purposes of the privilege, which documents, if any, came within the "absolute" portion of the privilege and were thus immune from discovery, and which documents, if any, came within the "conditional" portion of the privilege. (Opinion by Jefferson (Bernard) Acting P. J.,  with Lillie , J., and Radin, J.,  concurring.)

Headnotes

CALIFORNIA OFFICIAL REPORTS HEADNOTES

Classified to California Digest of Official Reports, 3d Series

CA(1) (1) Discovery and Depositions § 35—Protections Against Improper Discovery—Privileges—Work Product Rule—Life of Privilege.

--In an action against an automobile insurer for damages arising out of defendant's alleged bad faith, fraud and deceit, in connection with plaintiffs' uninsured motorist claims that had become the subject of arbitration, the trial court erred in ruling that the work-product privilege was not applicable to material from the files of the attorney who had represented plaintiffs with respect to their claims, since that matter had been completed. The policies behind the creation of the work-product privilege, i.e., encouraging the attorney to make a thorough preparation for trial, including analysis of unfavorable aspects of his case, as well as favorable aspects, and preventing one attorney from taking undue advantage of another's industry and efforts, have equal validity in support of the principle that the privilege should not be held to terminate simply because the litigation or matter in which the attorney's work product was created has come to an end.

CA(2) (2) Discovery and Depositions § 35—Protections Against Improper Discovery

—Privileges—Work Product Rule—Who May Claim Privilege.

--The attorney work-product privilege may be claimed by the client although the privilege belongs to the attorney. Since the privilege belongs to the attorney, the attorney may waive it, even over his client's objection, but in the absence of the attorney, the client has standing to claim the privilege on his behalf.

CA(3) (3) Discovery and Depositions § 35—Protections Against Improper Discovery

—Privileges—Work Product Rule—Waiver of Privilege.

--The filing and prosecution of a civil action for damages against an automobile insurance company, arising out of plaintiffs' previous uninsured motorist coverage dispute with defendant, did not constitute a waiver by plaintiffs of the attorney work-product privilege with respect to contents of the file of the attorney who represented them in the prior dispute. Nor could plaintiffs' possession of the file material be deemed a waiver of the privilege by their former attorney, though the attorney's surrender of the file to them evidenced a consent for plaintiffs to waive the privilege if they so desired. The attorney's "disclosure" of the privileged material did not amount to a waiver since it was to the clients whose interests in nondisclosure were supported by the policy reasons which underlie the creation of the privilege.

CA(4a) (4a) CA(4b) (4b) Discovery and Depositions § 35—Protections Against Improper Discovery—Privileges—Work Product Rule—Determining Applicability.

--The trial court's ruling in an action against an automobile insurer that plaintiffs were not entitled to claim the attorney work-product privilege with respect to material defendant sought to obtain through discovery could not be sustained on the basis that plaintiffs had failed to make a showing of preliminary facts to establish that the privilege applied to the documents in question, where the trial court did not consider the question of whether plaintiffs had made an adequate showing but denied their claim of privilege on the sole ground that it had terminated with the termination of the matter for which the privileged material was prepared. Since that ruling was erroneous, the trial court was required to make an in camera inspection of the documents to determine which documents, if any, do not fall within the concept of "work product" for purposes of the privilege, and hence are subject to discovery; which documents, if any, come within the "absolute" portion of the privilege and are thus immune from discovery; and which documents, if any, come within the "conditional" portion of the privilege.

CA(5) (5) Discovery and Depositions § 35—Protections Against Improper Discovery

—Privileges—Work Product Rule—Determining Applicability.

--A party claiming the conditional portion of the attorney work-product privilege (applicable to material of a derivative or interpretative nature such as diagrams, charts, audit reports of books, papers, or records, and findings, opinions and reports of experts employed by an attorney to analyze evidentiary material) has the initial burden of establishing that the matter sought to be disclosed comes within the concept of the privilege, but the party seeking disclosure has the burden of establishing that a denial of disclosure will unfairly prejudice him in preparing his claim or defense, or result in an injustice. The judge must weigh the evidence presented to support such a contention against any evidence to support the competing interest of protecting the attorney who claims the privilege for his efforts and industry in trial preparation. Under the absolute portion of the privilege, however, the work product of an attorney is immune from discovery under any circumstances if such work product consists of a writing that reflects an attorney's impressions, conclusions, opinions, or legal research or theories.

Counsel: Michael J. Piuze ▼ for Petitioners.

No appearance for Respondent.

Brendan Daniel Lynch and Lynberg & Nelsen for Real Parties in Interest.

Judges: Opinion by Jefferson (Bernard) Acting P. J., * ▼ with Lillie ▼, J., and Radin ▼, J., + ▼ concurring.

Opinion by: JEFFERSON

Opinion

[*58] [276] Five petitioners are before us seeking a writ of prohibition to review a trial court's order granting a [*59] motion to compel further answers to interrogatories. On April 3, 1977, petitioners sustained personal injuries in a motor vehicle accident with an uninsured motorist. The motor vehicle in which plaintiffs were occupants was provided insurance through a policy issued by Allstate Insurance Company. Petitioners sought from Allstate payment of medical expenses and uninsured motorist benefits. Petitioners' claims became the subject of arbitration. [2] The arbitrator's decision was rendered on February 8, 1978.

In October 1978, petitioners, as plaintiffs, filed against Allstate Insurance Company and several individuals as defendants, a complaint seeking damages for breach of insurance contract, a bad faith refusal to pay benefits, fraud and deceit, arising out of the failure of defendants to settle the uninsured motorist claims. These defendants are the real parties in interest before us.

During the period of the pendency of petitioners' uninsured motorist claims against real parties in interest, from April 3, 1977, through the filing of the arbitrator's decision on February 8, 1978, petitioners were represented by Donald Kottler ▼, an attorney at law. Petitioners' civil action against real parties in interest charges, basically, that, during this period from April 3, 1977, through February 8, 1978, real parties in interest violated their duty to petitioners of fair dealing by refusing to negotiate a good faith settlement of the medical [277] expenses claims and the uninsured motorist benefits. 1 ▼

[*3] I

History of Discovery Proceedings Leading up to the Issues Before Us of the Attorney's Work-product Privilege

In May 1979, in the civil action, defendants sought the production for copying or photographing of the entire legal file (of Attorney Kottler) that pertained to the uninsured motorist claims and arbitration of such claims. Plaintiffs resisted production of this file on various grounds, including an assertion of the lawyer-client and the attorney's work-product privileges. The trial court denied defendants' motion for [*60] production, suggesting that defendants proceed in their discovery attempts by way of interrogatories to plaintiffs so that specific documents could be identified and described, thus permitting the trial court to make an appropriate ruling on plaintiffs' assertions of privilege.

Defendants then submitted interrogatories to plaintiffs to obtain information regarding the number of, and other information concerning documents in the possession of plaintiffs' former attorney regarding the uninsured motorist claims against Allstate Insurance Company. Plaintiffs responded by raising the same objections including the reassertion of the lawyer-client 4 and attorney's work-product privileges. Defendants next moved for further answers to interrogatories. The trial court granted the motion and, on August 30, 1979, ordered plaintiffs to answer the previous interrogatories, but permitted plaintiffs to provide defendants with copies of documents in lieu of answering the interrogatories. The trial court's August 30 order provided for plaintiffs to answer the interrogatories with respect only to those documents, the copies of which were not provided to defendants. With respect to each document, the interrogatories asked whether plaintiffs were contending that such document was privileged against disclosure by virtue of the attorney's work-product privilege or the lawyer-client privilege or both. The trial court's order required that, if plaintiffs contended that a particular document was the work product of plaintiffs' former attorney, they should indicate whether they intended the privilege involved to be that of the absolute or qualified privilege and, if so, why.

Pursuant to the trial court's August 30, 1979, order, plaintiffs, on November 29, 1979, answered the interrogatories and set forth that the documents -- copies of which 5 they were not providing to defendants -- numbered a total of 64 and all were privileged against disclosure by the attorney's work-product privilege. Of the 64 documents, plaintiffs' answers described them by categories such as attorney's notes; deposition summary; clients' report of examination; medical file review; letters; chronological case notes; negotiation summaries; statements and diagrams; and trial preparation and trial notes. Most of these documents were claimed by plaintiffs to fall within the absolute portion of the attorney's work-product privilege, while only a few were claimed to come within the conditional portion of this privilege.

In January 1980, defendants moved for an order to compel further answers to the interrogatories and for sanctions for failure of plaintiffs to comply with the previous trial court's order. Plaintiffs filed opposition [*61] to this motion of defendants. This motion was finally ruled on by the trial court on April 1, 1980. The trial court ruled that all documents as to which the sole objection of plaintiffs was that of the attorney's work-product privilege must be produced by plaintiffs without qualification. The trial court placed 6 its ruling on the ground that the attorney's work-product privilege is not applicable to litigation *278 which is subsequent to the completion of the matter with respect to which the attorney's work-product privilege is claimed. It is this ruling of the trial court which plaintiffs attack in the prohibition writ proceeding before us.

II

The Issues

Defendants seek to support the trial court's ruling denying plaintiffs' claims of the attorney's work-product privilege on several grounds apart from the one ground relied upon by the trial court.

Defendants urge (1) that the attorney [7] is the holder of the attorney's work-product privilege and that the client may not assert it on behalf of the attorney; (2) that the attorney's work-product privilege was waived by plaintiffs as clients being in possession of their attorney's file and filing the civil action against defendants; (3) that plaintiffs did not make an adequate showing of preliminary facts to establish that the documents in question qualified as an attorney's "work product," and whether the "absolute" or "conditional" portion of the privilege was applicable.

III

CA(1)↑ (1) product Privilege Does Not Terminate at the Conclusion of the Particular Matter or Litigation for Which the Work-product Was Produced but Remains Viable in Subsequent Litigation

The trial court rejected plaintiff's claim of the attorney's work-product privilege for the 64 documents from their former attorney's file on [*62] the sole ground that the attorney's work-product privilege automatically terminated at the conclusion of the uninsured motorist claims matter and could not be asserted in the subsequent civil litigation between plaintiffs and defendants. We hold this ruling to be error.

This question has been [8] considered primarily in other states and in the federal courts. One view has been that the attorney's work-product privilege survives to apply in subsequent litigation if there is a close relationship between the prior case in which the work-product was prepared and the subsequent litigation in which the privilege for nondisclosure is sought to be invoked. A case so holding is the Delaware case of Riggs Nat. Bank of Washington, D.C. v. Zimmer (Del. Ch. 1976) 355 A.2d 709.

The Riggs court set forth the principle in this language: "Some courts have held that an attorney's memorandum in a prior case involving different parties does not have the protection of the work product privilege, particularly when the prior case is remote in time and issues from the case being currently litigated. [Citations.] Others consider that the broad purpose of the rule which is designed to encourage effective legal representation by removing counsel's fear that his thoughts will be invaded by his adversary if he records them would be frustrated if access to his files were later permitted. [Citations.] [para.] Thus, the decisions do not provide an easy answer. Each case must turn [9] on its own facts. The decision appropriately would depend on how closely related the prior litigation is to the litigation at hand." (Riggs, supra, 355 A.2d 709, 716.)

In Duplan Corp. v. Moulinage et Retorderie de Chavanoz (4th Cir. 1973) 487 F.2d 480, the court rejected the connected or closely related case limitation and held that an attorney's work product remains protected from disclosure after the termination of the action in which the work product was prepared even though disclosure is sought in subsequent unrelated litigation. We believe that the Duplan decision represents the better view. We hold, therefore, that HN1↑ the attorney's work-product privilege [279] (Code Civ. Proc., § 2016 subds. (b), (g)) survives the termination of the litigation or matter in which the work product is prepared and may be claimed in subsequent litigation -- whether related or unrelated to the prior matter -- to preclude disclosure of the attorney's work product. The continuance of the attorney's work-product privilege for subsequent litigation applies both to work product which falls within [*63] the conditional portion of the privilege and to work product which falls [10] within the absolute portion of the privilege. 3↓

We deem the policy behind the creation of the attorney's work-product privilege to have equal validity in support of the principle that the privilege should not be held to terminate simply because the litigation [11] or matter in which the attorney's work product was created has come to an end. This policy has been described as follows: "The policy is two-fold: Nondisclosure of his work product is deemed desirable (1) to encourage the attorney to make a thorough preparation for trial, including analysis of unfavorable aspects of his case, as well as the favorable aspects, and (2) to prevent one attorney from taking undue advantage of another's industry and efforts." (Jefferson, Cal. Evidence Benchbook (1972) Attorney's Work-Product Privilege, § 41.1, p. 702.)

IV

CA(2)↑ (2) product Privilege May Be Claimed by the Client Although the Privilege Belongs to the Attorney

Defendants assert that the plaintiffs had no standing to claim the attorney's work-product privilege for documents in their possession -- documents received by them from Kottler, their former attorney, and claimed to constitute the "work product" of Kottler. It is the thesis of defendants that the attorney's work-product privilege belongs to the attorney only and that only the attorney -- not the client -- may claim the privilege to preclude disclosure of the privileged information. For this view, defendants rely [12] upon Lohman v. Superior Court (1978) 81 Cal.App.3d 90 [146 Cal.Rptr. 171]. We conclude that Lohman is neither controlling nor persuasive with respect to the erroneous view espoused by defendants.

[*64] In Lohman, the deposition of the plaintiff's former attorney was being taken by the defendant. The defendant sought to get from the attorney testimony as to certain opinions formed by him while representing the plaintiff. The plaintiff objected, asserting both the lawyer-client privilege and the attorney's work-product privilege. The deponent-attorney indicated that he was willing to testify with respect to the opinions requested. The Lohman court held that, since the attorney's work-product privilege belongs to the attorney and he, as holder of the privilege, was willing to waive it, the former client could not validly assert the privilege to prevent the attorney from so testifying.

The Lohman court recognized that Mack v. Superior Court (1968) 259 Cal.App.2d 7 [66 Cal.Rptr. 280], had held that, although Code of Civil Procedure section 2016 -- which creates the attorney's work-product privilege -- does not set forth the persons who are [13] entitled to claim the privilege, it would adopt a rule of law that the client as well as the attorney may claim this privilege. The Lohman court criticized the Mack case because of the latter's statement that "[the] work product privilege was created [280] for the protection of the client as well as the attorney . . ." (Mack, supra, 259 Cal.App.2d 7, 10.) In disagreeing with Mack, the Lohman court makes the observation that "it appears that the whole thrust of the work product privilege was to provide a qualified privilege for the attorney preparing a case for trial and protecting the fruits of his labor from discovery." (Lohman, supra, 81 Cal.App.3d 90, 101; fn. omitted.)

The Lohman court is subject to criticism for its misreading of the holding of Mack. The Mack court does not hold that a client is a holder of the attorney's work-product privilege. The Mack court simply determines that, HN3 in the absence of the attorney, the client has standing to assert the privilege on behalf of the attorney, the only holder of the privilege. The language of Mack to the effect that the privilege was created in the interest [14] of protecting the client as well as the attorney provides a basis for a judicial interpretation of Code of Civil Procedure section 2016 to permit a client to claim the attorney's work-product privilege whenever the attorney is not present to claim it himself. In Mack, the attorney was not present to claim the privilege while the client was present.

The Lohman decision itself is sound however. HN4 Since the attorney's work-product privilege belongs to the attorney, the attorney may waive it. This the attorney in Lohman did by agreeing to answer the questions [*65] posed to him at his deposition. Since the attorney, as the holder of the privilege, was willing to waive it, the former client could not object.

But in the case at bench, the situation is more analogous to Mack than to Lohman. Here plaintiffs were present, in possession of the documents belonging to their former attorney, Kottler, and, in his absence, had standing to claim the attorney's work-product privilege on his behalf. (See Jefferson, Cal. Evidence Benchbook (1972), The Attorney's Work-Product Privilege, § 41.1, p. 702.) This judicial interpretation of the attorney's work-product privilege [15] makes this privilege comparable to the rules governing the various privileges set forth in the Evidence Code. Thus, under the lawyer-client privilege, the client is the holder of the privilege but the lawyer is also entitled to claim the privilege for the client (Evid. Code, §§ 953, 954); under the physician-patient privilege, the patient is the holder of the privilege but the physician is entitled to claim the privilege for the patient (Evid. Code, §§ 993, 994); and under the psychotherapist-patient privilege, the patient is the holder of the privilege but the psychotherapist is entitled to claim the privilege for the patient (Evid. Code, §§ 1013, 1014).

V

CA(3) (3) The Attorney's Work-product Privilege Was Not Waived by Plaintiffs as Clients Being in Possession of Their Attorney's File and Bringing a Civil Action Against Defendants

Defendants contend that the filing by plaintiffs of a civil action for damages against defendants arising out of the matter of plaintiffs' uninsured motorist dispute with defendants -- a dispute in which plaintiffs were represented by Attorney Kottler -- should be held to constitute a waiver of Attorney

Kottler's work-product privilege. Certainly Kottler's [16] action in surrendering his file to plaintiffs, his former clients, would evidence a consent for plaintiffs to waive the privilege if they so desired. But authorization by the attorney to his client to waive the privilege cannot be construed as a waiver in and of itself. Nor can the action of an attorney in disclosing the contents of his file to his client be construed as a waiver by disclosure of the privileged material since the disclosure is not to a disinterested person (see Kerns Constr. Co. v. Superior Court (1968) 266 Cal.App.2d 405 [72 Cal.Rptr. 74] [attorney's consent to an expert disclosing content of his report in his deposition [66] testimony]) but to the client whose interest in nondisclosure is supported by the policy reasons which [281] underlie the creation of the privilege. (Code Civ. Proc., § 2016, subd. (g).)

Does the filing and prosecution of the civil action by plaintiffs constitute a waiver of the privilege? To support their position that the answer to this question should be in the affirmative, defendants rely principally upon Merritt v. Superior Court (1970) 9 Cal.App.3d 721 [88 Cal.Rptr. 337], and Fireman's Fund Ins. [17] Co. v. Superior Court (1977) 72 Cal.App.3d 786 [140 Cal.Rptr. 677]. Neither of those cases stands for the position asserted by defendants. In Merritt, the holding that the discovery sought was not barred by an assertion of the attorney's work-product privilege was based -- not upon a determination of waiver of the privilege -- but upon a determination that the trial court acted within its judicial discretion, as a part of the operation of the privilege, in finding that it would be unfair to deny discovery. (Code Civ. Proc., § 2016, subd. (b).)

The Fireman's Fund case held only that a defendant was entitled to take the deposition of plaintiff's attorney who represented plaintiff in the prior matter. The court remarked: "It does not appear that petitioner seeks to obtain privileged information or counsel's work product. Of course if such attempt is made during the deposition, Mr. Smolen [the deponent-attorney] will have available adequate means to prevent it." (Fireman's Fund, supra, 72 Cal.App.3d 786, 790.)

We thus reject defendants' theory that plaintiffs waived the attorney's work-product privilege by filing and prosecuting the civil action against defendants.

[18] VI

CA(4a) (4a) The Question of Whether Plaintiffs Failed to Make an Adequate Showing of the Preliminary Facts to Establish That the Documents Sought by Defendants Qualified as "Work Product" or Whether Such Documents Came Within the Absolute or Conditional Portion of the Attorney's Work-product Privilege

Defendants assert that the trial court's order denying plaintiffs' claim of the attorney's work-product privilege for the 64 documents in dispute [67] may be sustained on the basis that plaintiffs failed to make a showing of preliminary facts to establish that the privilege applied to the documents in question. The dispositive answer to this contention of defendants is that the trial court did not consider the question of whether plaintiffs had made an adequate showing since the denial of plaintiffs' claim of privilege was placed squarely on the sole ground that the attorney's work-product privilege terminates with the termination of the litigation or matter for which the privileged material was prepared. Nevertheless, our review of the record below negates any conclusion that, as a matter of law, plaintiffs failed to make a showing that would permit the trial judge to hold that [19] neither the absolute portion nor the conditional portion of the privilege was applicable to any of the 64 documents making up the file of plaintiffs' former Attorney, Kottler.

CA(5) (5) In connection with the conditional portion of the attorney's work-product privilege, the governing principle is set forth in the following language: "HN5 The party claiming the attorney's work-product privilege has the initial burden of establishing that the matter sought to be disclosed comes within the concept of an attorney's work product. But the party seeking disclosure has the burden of establishing that a denial of disclosure will (1) unfairly prejudice him in preparing his claim or defense, or (2) result in an injustice. The judge must weigh the evidence presented to support such a contention against any evidence to support the competing interest of protecting the attorney who claims the privilege for his efforts and industry in trial preparation." (Jefferson, Cal. Evidence Benchbook (1972) Attorney's Work-Product Privilege, § 41.1, p. 703.)

On the other hand, with respect to the absolute portion of the privilege, HN6 the work product of an attorney is immune from discovery under any circumstances [20] if such work product consists of a writing that [282] reflects an attorney's impressions, conclusions, opinions, or legal research or theories. (Code Civ. Proc., § 2016, subd. (b).)

As we have pointed out previously, plaintiffs gave a general description of each document in question and asserted that each such document was immune from disclosure by reason of the attorney's work-product privilege and made a claim of the absolute portion of the privilege for some of the documents and the conditional portion of the privilege for the others. It would appear, therefore, that each document in question might fall into one of three categories: (1) as being immune from discovery by reason of the absolute portion of the privilege, (2) as [*68] being immune from discovery by reason of the conditional portion of the privilege, or (3) as being nonwork product and not within the protection of the attorney's work-product privilege.

CA(4b)↑ (4b) In order for the trial judge to rule on the claim of the attorney's work product privilege for each of the 64 documents, it is necessary for the court to make an in camera inspection of these documents. Such an in camera inspection will [21] enable the court to determine (1) which documents, if any, do not fall within the concept of "work product" for this privilege (see Jefferson, Cal. Evidence Benchbook (1972) Meaning of "Work Product" for Attorney's Work-Product Privilege, § 41.2, pp. 709-712; 1978 Supp., § 41.2, pp. 482-483) and hence are subject to discovery; (2) which documents, if any, come within the "absolute" portion of the attorney's work-product privilege and are thus immune from discovery by defendants; and (3) which documents, if any, come within the "conditional" portion of the attorney's work-product privilege.

HN7↑ A document from Attorney Kottler's file comes within the "absolute" portion of the attorney's work-product privilege if it consists of a "writing that reflects an attorney's impressions, conclusions, opinions or legal research or theories." (Code Civ. Proc., § 2016, subd. \(b\).) Such a writing "shall not be discoverable under any circumstances." (Ibid., italics added.) The language of section 2016, subdivision \(b\), is clear and explicit. It offers no opportunity for compromise or variation. There is no authorization for the court to weigh or balance any competing interests between the [22] party seeking disclosure and the party resisting disclosure. Invocation of the attorney's work-product privilege with respect to such a document precludes discovery since such a document "is protected absolutely from disclosure by the attorney's work-product privilege . . ." (Rodriguez v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (1978) 87 Cal.App.3d 626, 648 [151 Cal.Rptr. 399].) (Italics in original.)

HN8↑ A document from Attorney Kottler's file comes within the "conditional" portion of the attorney's work-product privilege if the document meets the definition of "work product" for this privilege but is not a writing that reflects the attorney's impressions, conclusions, opinions, or legal research or theories. An attorney's "conditional" work product consists of material that is of a derivative or interpretative nature such as diagrams, charts, audit reports of books, papers, or records, and findings, opinions and reports of experts employed by an attorney to analyze evidentiary material. (See Jefferson, Cal. Evidence Benchbook [*69] (1972) Meaning of "Work Product" for Attorney's Work-Product Privilege, § 41.2, pp. 709-712.)

HN9↑ Material that is considered of a nonderivative [23] or noninterpretative nature and that is evidentiary in character does not constitute the attorney's work product. This distinction between derivative and nonderivative matter strikes a reasonable balance between the competing policies of encouraging thorough trial preparation by lawyers, by making work product a privilege from disclosure and, at the same time, of permitting broad discovery to prevent trials from constituting games of chance." (Id. at p. 711.) (Italics in original.)

HN10↑ Major categories of nonderivative evidentiary material excluded from the concept of an attorney's work product include (1) the identity or location of evidentiary matter, such as material objects; (2) material [283] objects themselves that constitute admissible evidence; (3) information about prospective or potential witnesses, such as their names, phone numbers, addresses, and occupations; and (4) written or recorded statements of prospective witnesses." (Id. at p. 711.)

In the case at bench, HN11↑ if the trial court determines that certain documents from Attorney Kottler's file come within the conditional portion of the attorney's work-product privilege, it must then hold that such [24] documents are protected by the privilege and are immune from disclosure to defendants unless the court determines that a denial of disclosure (1) will unfairly prejudice the defendants seeking disclosure in preparing their defense, or (2) will result in an injustice. In Merritt v. Superior Court (1970) 9 Cal.App.3d 721 [88 Cal.Rptr. 337], the court determined that an attorney's correspondence and discussions involved in the preparation of his client's actions came within the conditional portion of the attorney's work-product privilege and that, under the circumstances presented, a denial of disclosure to the adverse party seeking disclosure would result in an injustice to such adverse party. Hence, the claim of privilege was denied.

In American Mut. Liab. Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1974) 38 Cal.App.3d 579 [113 Cal.Rptr. 561], a claim of the attorney's work-product privilege was asserted as to an attorney's file that contained research references, investigative and expert reports, comments by counsel on depositions and trial testimony and interviews with witnesses labelled as status reports. The trial court denied the claim of privilege without conducting [25] an in camera inspection of the file. This was held to be error [*70] since only an in camera inspection of the attorney's file would enable the trial judge to determine what documents, if any, came within the absolute portion of the attorney's work-product privilege, what documents, if any, came within the conditional portion of this privilege, and what documents, if any, were not work-product and clearly subject to disclosure.

In the case at bench, the trial court must use the in camera procedure to determine the validity of plaintiffs' claims of the attorney's work-product privilege in light of the views expressed herein.

Let a peremptory writ issue directing respondent court to vacate and set aside the subject order and proceed in accordance with the views expressed in this opinion.

Footnotes

* ¶

Retired Presiding Justice of the Court of Appeal sitting under assignment by the Chairperson of the Judicial Council.

+ ¶

Assigned by the Chairperson of the Judicial Council.

* ¶

Retired Presiding Justice of the Court of Appeal sitting under assignment by the Chairperson of the Judicial Council.

+ ¶

Assigned by the Chairperson of the Judicial Council.

1 ¶

Hereafter, for convenience, petitioners will be referred to as plaintiffs and real parties in interest will be referred to as defendants.

2

As the trial court has made an order in a discovery matter relating to a claim of privilege, review by extraordinary writ is appropriate since it appears that the trial court may have committed error. (Sav-on Drugs, Inc. v. Superior Court (1975) 15 Cal.3d 1, 5 [123 Cal.Rptr. 283, 538 P.2d 739]; Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Superior Court (1970) 2 Cal.3d 161, 169 [84 Cal.Rptr. 718, 465 P.2d 854].)

3

On remand of Duplan, supra, 487 F.2d 480, the district court interpreted the decision of the court of appeals as applying only to work product within the conditional portion of the privilege. On a second appeal, the court of appeals made clear that HN2 work product which falls within the absolute portion of the privilege -- opinion work product, which consists of an attorney's mental impressions, conclusions, opinions or legal theories -- is precluded from disclosure in subsequent litigation just as if such opinion work product had been created expressly in preparation for the subsequent litigation. (Duplan Corp. v. Moulinage et Retorderie de Chavanoz (4th Cir. 1974) 509 F.2d 730, cert. den. 420 U.S. 997 [43 L.Ed.2d 680, 95 S.Ct. 1438].)

Content Type: Cases

Terms: 108 Cal.App.3d 55

Narrow By: Sources: CA; Cases

Date and Time: Jan 15, 2018 07:29:14 p.m. EST

About
LexisNexis®

Privacy Policy

Terms & Conditions

Sign
Out

Copyright ©
2018
LexisNexis. All rights reserved.

