

Document: Williamson v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County, 21 C...

Williamson v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County, 21 Cal. 3d 829

Copy Citation

Supreme Court of California

August 14, 1978

L.A. No. 30754

Reporter

21 Cal. 3d 829 * | 582 P.2d 126  | 148 Cal. Rptr. 39  | 1978 Cal. LEXIS 264 ****

GEORGE WILLIAMSON, Petitioner, v. THE SUPERIOR COURT OF LOS ANGELES COUNTY, Respondent;
SHELL OIL COMPANY et al., Real Parties in Interest

Subsequent History: [*1] The Petition of Real Parties in Interest Firestone and Big Four for a Rehearing was Denied September 14, 1978. Clark ▼, J., was of the Opinion that the Petition should be Granted.

Disposition: Let a peremptory writ of mandate issue as prayed.

Core Terms

discovery, withdraw, disclosure, work product, deposition, preparing, indemnification, suppression, attorney's, parties, discoverable, adversary's, designated, discover, tire, suppress evidence, expert opinion, expert witness, present case, trial court, codefendant, conclusions, defendants', cases

Case Summary

Procedural Posture

Respondent trial court sought review of the decision of a California Court of Appeal, which determined that a peremptory writ of mandate should issue after respondent denied petitioner victim access to the report of an expert witness in petitioners action for personal injury against employer, machine manufacturer, and tire company.

Overview

Petitioner victim was injured while using a tire-changing machine. He filed a personal injury action against employer, machine manufacturer, and tire company. During discovery, the machine manufacturer employed an expert witness to investigate the accident. The expert witness submitted a report that stated that in his opinion, the cause was the tire company's defective tire. The machine manufacturer withdrew the expert witnesses designation as an expert witness pursuant to an agreement with the tire company. Respondent trial court precluded petitioner from discovering the results of the expert witness's investigation. Petitioner then filed a petition for writ of mandate, which the appellate court issued. The court granted a hearing to resolve the issue of work product doctrine. The court issued a peremptory writ of mandate and held that the machine manufacturer's conduct was not protected against disclosure under Cal. Civ. Proc. Code § 2016. The court found that the bargain between the machine manufacturer and the tire company was illegal because it was for the suppression of evidence. Nothing underlying the work product doctrine justified the conduct in this case.

Outcome

The court affirmed the decision of the appellate court in favor of petitioner victim and issued a peremptory writ of mandate because respondent trial court's ruling was incorrect. The bargain between the machine manufacturer and the tire company was illegal because it was to suppress the evidence of the report from the expert witness.

▼ LexisNexis® Headnotes

Civil Procedure > Attorneys ▼ > General Overview ▼

Civil Procedure > Discovery & Disclosure ▼ > General Overview ▼

Civil Procedure > ... > Privileged Communications ▼ >  Work Product Doctrine ▼ > General Overview ▼

HN1 Civil Procedure, Attorneys

Cal. Civ. Proc. Code § 2016\(b\) provides that the work product of an attorney shall not be discoverable unless the court determines that denial of discovery will unfairly prejudice the party seeking discovery in preparing his claim or defense or will result in an injustice, and any writing that reflects an attorney's impressions, conclusions, opinions, or legal research or theories shall not be discoverable under any circumstances. Accordingly, § 2016\(b\) affords a conditional or qualified protection for work product generally, and an absolute protection as to an attorney's impressions and conclusions. More like this Headnote

Shepardize - Narrow by this Headnote

Civil Procedure > ... > Privileged Communications ▼ >  Work Product Doctrine ▼ > General Overview ▼

Criminal Law & Procedure > Counsel ▼ > Right to Counsel ▼ > General Overview ▼

HN2 Privileged Communications, Work Product Doctrine

See Cal. Civ. Proc. Code § 2016\(g\). More like this Headnote

Shepardize - Narrow by this Headnote

Civil Procedure > ... > Privileged Communications ▼ >  Work Product Doctrine ▼ > General Overview ▼

HN3 Privileged Communications, Work Product Doctrine

Whatever the extent of the concept of an attorney's work product may be, it is clear that it is the attorney's work, or that of his agents or employees, that is involved. More like this Headnote

Shepardize - Narrow by this Headnote

Civil Procedure > ... > Privileged Communications ▼ >  Work Product Doctrine ▼ >

General Overview ▼

Civil Procedure > Discovery & Disclosure ▼ > Disclosure ▼ > Mandatory Disclosures ▼

HN4 Privileged Communications, Work Product Doctrine

While it may be appropriate to give broad immunity from discovery to an expert consultant's report developed at the initiative of counsel in preparation for trial, the courts agree that the initial status of the expert as consultant changes once the expert becomes a designated prospective witness. When it becomes reasonably certain an expert will give his professional opinion as a witness on a material matter in dispute, then his opinion has become a factor in the cause. At that point the expert has ceased to be merely a consultant and has become a counter in the litigation, one to be evaluated along with others. Such evaluation properly includes appropriate pretrial discovery. More like this Headnote

Shepardize - Narrow by this Headnote

Civil Procedure > ... > Discovery ▼ > Methods of Discovery ▼ > Expert Witness Discovery ▼

Civil Procedure > Discovery & Disclosure ▼ > Disclosure ▼ > Mandatory Disclosures ▼

HN5 Methods of Discovery, Expert Witness Discovery

While good cause normally must be shown to compel discovery of expert opinions in advance of trial, good cause includes a showing that the expert may be called as a witness. More like this Headnote

Shepardize - Narrow by this Headnote

Torts > Procedural Matters ▼ > Multiple Defendants ▼ > General Overview ▼

HN6 Procedural Matters, Multiple Defendants

An "adverse" party includes one who may likely strive to win a point at issue at the expense of the other. More like this Headnote

Shepardize - Narrow by this Headnote

Criminal Law & Procedure > Criminal Offenses ▼ > Miscellaneous Offenses ▼ >

General Overview ▼

Torts > Procedural Matters ▼ > Multiple Defendants ▼ > General Overview ▼

Criminal Law & Procedure > Preliminary Proceedings ▼ > Pretrial Motions & Procedures ▼ >

Suppression of Evidence ▼

HN7  Criminal Offenses, Miscellaneous Offenses

A bargain for the concealment or suppression of evidence is illegal. More like this Headnote

Shepardize - Narrow by this Headnote

▼ Headnotes/Syllabus

Summary

CALIFORNIA OFFICIAL REPORTS SUMMARY

Plaintiff filed suit against an oil company, a tire manufacturer, and the manufacturer of a tire changing machine, seeking damages for personal injuries sustained in the oil company's employ while using a tire changing machine to install a tire. Plaintiff alleged defects in both the tire and the tire changing machine. An expert employed by the machine manufacturer submitted a report stating his opinion that the cause of the accident was the defective tire, and not any defect in the tire changing machine. The expert was then designated as an expert witness to testify at trial, and plaintiff arranged to take his deposition. On the eve of the scheduled deposition, and following a meeting with the tire manufacturer's counsel, the machine manufacturer withdrew the expert's designation as expert witness. Plaintiff stated that the tire manufacturer entered into an agreement with the machine manufacturer providing that if it withdrew the expert as a witness, withheld his report from plaintiff's counsel, and refused to permit plaintiff's counsel to depose him, the tire manufacturer would indemnify the machine manufacturer against any liability it might incur arising from plaintiff's injuries. The machine manufacturer complied with the agreement, and plaintiff sought an order of the trial court to compel the expert's deposition and production of his report. Although the trial court authorized the deposition, it substantially limited the areas of plaintiff's inquiry, precluding plaintiff from discovering the result of the expert's investigation and his analysis of the accident.

The Supreme Court issued a writ of mandate ordering full disclosure of the report. The court held that, while the expert's report constituted the work product of the machine manufacturer's counsel, the issue was whether the report, as a work product, should be protected against disclosure under Code Civ. Proc., § 2016, subd. \(b\), providing that the work product of an attorney shall not be discoverable unless denial of discovery will unfairly prejudice the other party or result in an injustice. The court noted that, while good cause normally must be shown to compel discovery of expert opinions in advance of trial, good cause includes a showing that the expert may be called as a witness, and rejected the machine manufacturer's argument that its withdrawal of the expert as a witness restored the immunity from discovery which the expert's report originally enjoyed. The court held that agreement between the defendants was in the nature of a bargain for the concealment or suppression of evidence, was therefore illegal, and because the withdrawal of the expert as a witness directly flowed from the illegal agreement to suppress evidence, the denial of discovery would result in an injustice under Code Civ. Proc., § 2016, subd. \(a\). The court rejected defendants' argument that their agreement merely represented the sharing of information between two nonadversary codefendants, and therefore constituted proper cooperation between parties sharing a common interest. (Opinion by Tobriner, J., with Bird ▼, C. J., Mosk ▼ and Manuel ▼, JJ., concurring. Separate dissenting opinion by Richardson, J., with Clark ▼, J., concurring.)

HeadnotesCALIFORNIA OFFICIAL REPORTS HEADNOTES

Classified to California Digest of Official Reports, 3d Series

CA\(1a\) (1a) CA\(1b\) (1b) Discovery and Depositions § 35—Protections Against Improper Discovery—Privileges—Work Product Rule—Expert Opinion—Witness—Withdrawal.

--In an action seeking damages for personal injuries sustained by plaintiff while using a tire changing machine manufactured by one defendant to install a tire manufactured by another defendant, in which plaintiff alleged defects in both the tire and the tire changing machine, plaintiff was entitled to full discovery of a report prepared by an expert employed by the tire changing machine manufacturer stating that the cause of the accident was the defective tire, where the expert was originally designated as a witness at trial, but where he was withdrawn as a witness in return for the tire manufacturer's promise of indemnification to the tire changing machine's manufacturer. Under these circumstances, the indemnity agreement between defendants was in the nature of a contract for the concealment or suppression of evidence, was illegal, and since the withdrawal of the expert as a witness directly flowed from the illegal agreement to suppress evidence, plaintiff was entitled to discovery under Code Civ. Proc., § 2016, subd. \(a\), providing that the work product of an attorney is discoverable when denial of discovery would result in an injustice.

CA\(2\) (2) Discovery and Depositions § 35—Protections Against Improper Discovery—Privileges—Work Product Rule—Expert Opinion.

--As an expert opinion, developed as a result of the initiative of defendant's counsel in preparing for trial of a personal injury action, an expert's report concerning the cause of the injuries constituted the work product of defendant's counsel.

CA\(3\) (3) Discovery and Depositions § 35—Protections Against Improper Discovery—Privileges—Work Product Rule—Expert Opinion—Witness.

--While it is appropriate to give broad immunity from discovery to an expert consultant's report developed at the initiative of counsel in preparation for trial, the initial status of the expert as consultant changes once the expert becomes a designated prospective witness. At that point, the expert's opinion becomes a factor in the cause, and while good cause normally must be shown to compel discovery of expert opinions in advance of trial, good cause includes a showing that the expert may be called as a witness.

Counsel: Belli & Choulos, Belli, Ashe & Choulos, Irmias, Simke, Chodos & Marshall ▼, Irmias, Simke & Chodos ▼, Roman M. Silberfeld ▼ and David Manning Chodos ▼ for Petitioner.

No appearance for Respondent.

Morgan, Wenzel & McNicholas, Dennis J. Sinclitico, George H. Ellis ▼, Belcher, Henzie & Biegenzahn ▼, Leo J. Biegenzahn and Uzzell S. Branson III ▼ for Real Parties in Interest.

Judges: Opinion by Tobriner, J., with Bird ▼, C. J., Mosk ▼ and Manuel ▼, JJ., concurring. Separate dissenting opinion by Richardson, J., with Clark ▼, J., concurring.

Opinion by: TOBRINER

Opinion

[*832] [128] [41] In this petition for writ of mandate plaintiff seeks to discover a report prepared by an expert employed by counsel for one of the defendants in the underlying personal injury suit. Defendant had originally intended to call the expert as a witness at trial, and hence, under the relevant statute and case law, the expert's report would normally have been discoverable by plaintiff. [*2] In return for a codefendant's promise of indemnification, however, the defendant who employed the expert subsequently withdrew him as a witness. CA(1a) ↑ (1a) This case therefore presents the question whether the withdrawal of the expert witness on the basis of such an indemnification agreement reestablishes the privilege against disclosure enjoyed by defendant or leaves the plaintiff free to discover the content of the report. Although the trial court denied plaintiff access to the report, we have concluded that under the circumstances of this case plaintiff is entitled to discover the contents of the report.

In September 1971, plaintiff George Williamson filed suit against defendants Shell Oil Company (Shell), Firestone Tire and Rubber Company (Firestone), and Big Four Automotive Equipment Corporation (Big Four), seeking damages for personal injuries which he sustained in Shell's employ while using a tire-changing machine manufactured by Big Four to install a Firestone tire. Plaintiff alleged defects in both the tire and the tire-changing machine.

During the course of discovery proceedings, Big Four employed O. Edward Kurt to investigate the accident and to submit a report. Following his [*3] investigation, Kurt submitted a report which stated that in his opinion the cause of the accident was Firestone's defective tire, and not any defect in the Big Four machine. After receiving this report, which, of course, was quite favorable to its case, Big Four designated Kurt as an expert witness to testify at trial. Plaintiff arranged to take Kurt's deposition and thereby to learn the results of Kurt's investigation.

Plaintiff, however, never learned the results of the investigation. On the eve of Kurt's scheduled deposition, and following a meeting with Firestone's counsel, Big Four withdrew Kurt's designation as expert witness. Plaintiff states without contradiction that at the meeting between defendants' counsel, Big Four discussed Kurt's findings with Firestone [*833] and turned over copies of Kurt's report to Firestone. [1↓] After examining the report, Firestone's counsel, who naturally preferred the nondisclosure of Kurt's adverse findings, entered into an agreement with Big Four which provided that if Big Four withdrew Kurt as a witness, withheld his report from plaintiff's counsel, and refused to permit plaintiff's counsel to depose him, Firestone would indemnify [*4] Big Four against any liability Big Four might incur arising from plaintiff's injuries. In other words, Big Four agreed to silence its expert and withhold the information contained in his report from plaintiff [129] in return for valuable consideration -- indemnification -- from Firestone.

Big Four thereafter complied with its promise to Firestone, withdrawing Kurt as a prospective witness and rebuffing plaintiff's [42] attempt to depose Kurt or to obtain a copy of Kurt's report. Plaintiff sought an order of the trial court to compel Kurt's deposition and production of his report. Although the trial court authorized the deposition, it substantially limited the areas of plaintiff's inquiry, precluding plaintiff from discovering the results of Kurt's investigation and his analysis of the accident.

Plaintiff then filed a petition for writ of mandate in the Court of Appeal, [*5] seeking relief from the trial court's order. Although recognizing that extraordinary writs should not issue routinely in discovery cases, the Court of Appeal concluded that because the case presented ". . . questions of first impression that are of general importance to the trial courts and to the profession . . ." (Oceanside Union School Dist. v. Superior Court (1962) 58 Cal.2d 180, 185-186, fn. 4 [23 Cal.Rptr. 375, 373 P.2d 439]; see also Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Superior Court (1970) 2 Cal.3d 161, 169-171 [84 Cal.Rptr. 718, 465 P.2d 854]), an alternative writ should issue. After a hearing, the Court of Appeal ultimately determined that a peremptory writ of mandate should issue; we granted a hearing in order to resolve the novel issue of work product doctrine which this case presents.

HN1 Code of Civil Procedure section 2016, subdivision (b) provides in pertinent part, "The work product of an attorney shall not be discoverable unless the court determines that denial of discovery will unfairly prejudice the party seeking discovery in preparing his claim or defense or will result in an injustice, and any writing that reflects an attorney's impressions, conclusions, [*6] opinions, or legal research or theories shall not [*834] be discoverable under any circumstances." Accordingly, subdivision (b) affords a conditional or qualified protection for work product generally, and an absolute protection as to an attorney's impressions and conclusions. HN2 As subdivision (g) of the same section explains, "It is the policy of this state (i) to preserve the rights of attorneys to prepare cases for trial with that degree of privacy necessary to encourage them to prepare their cases thoroughly and to investigate not only the favorable but the unfavorable aspects of such cases and (ii) to prevent an attorney from taking undue advantage of his adversary's industry or efforts."

Section 2016 contains no definition of work product beyond extending protection to ". . . any writing that reflects an attorney's impressions, conclusions, opinions, or legal research or theories . . ." The cases indicate generally, however, that "material of a derivative character, such as diagrams prepared for trial, audit reports, appraisals, and other expert opinions, developed as a result of the initiative of counsel in preparing for trial," are also to be protected as work product. [*7] (Italics added.) (Mack v. Superior Court (1968) 259 Cal.App.2d 7, 10 [66 Cal.Rptr. 280]; accord, Southern Pacific Co. v. Superior Court (1969) 3 Cal.App.3d 195, 198-199 [83 Cal.Rptr. 231].) In San Diego Professional Assn. v. Superior Court (1962) 58 Cal.2d 194, 204-205 [23 Cal.Rptr. 384, 373 P.2d 448, 97 A.L.R.2d 761], for example, we held that expert engineers' "evaluation and opinions" commissioned by an attorney for the purpose of preparing for trial was work product. HN3 Whatever the extent of the concept of an attorney's work product may be, it is clear that . . . it is . . . the attorney's work, or that of his agents or employees, that is involved . . ." (Italics omitted.) (Wilson v. Superior Court (1964) 226 Cal.App.2d 715, 724 [38 Cal.Rptr. 255] [hg. den., May 27, 1964].) CA(2) (2) Thus as an expert opinion, developed as a result of the initiative of counsel in preparing for trial, Kurt's report clearly constitutes the work product of Big Four's counsel.

The issue before us, however, is whether Kurt's report, as work product of Big Four's counsel, should be protected against disclosure under section 2016. HN4 CA(3) (3) While it may be appropriate to give [*8] broad immunity from discovery to an expert consultant's report developed at the initiative [130] of counsel in preparation for trial, the courts agree that the initial status of the expert as consultant changes once the expert becomes a designated prospective witness. As the court stated in *Swartzman v. [43] Superior Court (1964) 231 Cal.App.2d 195, 203 [41 Cal.Rptr. 721], hg. den., Feb. 10, 1965, "[when] it becomes reasonably certain an expert will give his professional opinion as a witness on a material matter in dispute, then his opinion has [*835] become a factor in the cause. At that point the expert has ceased to be merely a consultant and has become a counter in the litigation, one to be evaluated along with others. Such evaluation properly includes appropriate pretrial discovery." (See also Mize v. Atchinson, T. & S. F. Ry. Co. (1975) 46 Cal.App.3d 436, 449 [120 Cal.Rptr. 787]; Bolles v. Superior Court (1971) 15 Cal.App.3d 962, 963 [93 Cal. Rptr. 719]; Dow Chemical Co. v. Superior Court (1969) 2 Cal.App.3d 1, 10 [82 Cal.Rptr. 288]; Scotsman Mfg. Co. v. Superior Court (1966) 242 Cal.App.2d 527, 530-532 [*9] [51 Cal.Rptr. 511].) HN5 While good cause normally must be shown to compel discovery of expert opinions in advance of trial, good cause includes a showing that the expert may be called as a witness. (See Sanders v. Superior Court (1973) 34 Cal.App.3d 270, 279 [109 Cal.Rptr. 770].)

CA(1b) (1b) In the present case, the expert consultant did not long retain his initial status as advisor, for after learning the favorable nature of Kurt's report, Big Four designated Kurt as an expert witness to testify at trial. Indisputedly at this point plaintiff was entitled to discover Kurt's report; if Big Four had used Kurt's testimony at trial, the report would surely have remained discoverable. Before Kurt's scheduled deposition took place, however, Big Four withdrew Kurt's designation as a witness. Big Four argues that its withdrawal of Kurt as witness restored the immunity from discovery which Kurt's report originally enjoyed. As Big Four contends, an attorney acting in the best interest of his client must be free to make whatever use of an expert's opinion will be most likely to insure a good result for the client at trial; thus an attorney may properly decide not to call as a witness even [*10] an expert whose opinion is favorable to the client, if, in the attorney's judgment, the client's interests will otherwise be better served.

While a party may, indeed, enjoy the right to withdraw an expert witness at any time prior to disclosure of that witness' proposed testimony, 2 the record in the present case demonstrates that Big Four did [*836] not decide unilaterally to withdraw Kurt as a matter of trial tactics or personal litigation strategy. Big Four's decision stemmed rather from the agreement with Firestone: Firestone offered to pay Big Four to withdraw Kurt, in order to eliminate Kurt's potentially damaging testimony from the trial. Thus it was under Firestone's influence and in response to an offer of payment of indemnification that Big Four secured Kurt's withdrawal.

[*11] We do not accept defendants' argument that their action merely represents the sharing of information between two nonadversary codefendants, and therefore constitutes proper cooperation between parties sharing a common interest. The court in Gorman Rupp Industries, Inc. v. Superior Court (1971) 20 Cal.App.3d 28, 31 [97 Cal. [131] Rptr. 377], explained that the fact that two parties are both defendants in no sense assures that they are not adversaries: "Each codefendant seeks to disclaim any responsibility for the alleged injuries, and [*44] argues that if there is responsibility for the alleged injuries it is due to the failure of the other. Certainly, there exists that relationship which suggests a conflict of interest. Petitioner [codefendant] has a vital interest in not relying solely on its lack of negligence or other avoidance of liability. Petitioner seeks to meet plaintiff's claim by showing the liability, if any, is that of another defendant. This clearly falls within the [rule] that HN6 an 'adverse' party includes one who may likely strive to win a point at issue at the expense of the other."

With respect to the issue toward which the Kurt report [*12] was directed -- defects in Firestone's tire -- the interests of Big Four and Firestone unquestionably conflicted. Big Four's interest lay in finding no negligence on its own part and in discovering a defect responsible for the accident in someone else's product -- here, Firestone's. On the other hand, Firestone's interest lay in finding no defect in its product. Because Kurt was about to testify in favor of Big Four and against Firestone, only Firestone's offer of indemnification could have induced Big Four not to call its favorable witness.

Moreover, the agreement between Big Four and Firestone is not as benign as "normal cooperative action" between codefendants bound by a common interest. Agreements to suppress evidence have long been held void as against public policy, both in California and in most common law [*837] jurisdictions. 3 (See Valentine v. Stewart (1860) 15 Cal. 387, 404, in which this court invalidated a contract to withdraw depositions taken in connection with litigation, as "affected with a fatal taint of illegality"; Rest., Contracts, § 554; 6A Corbin, Contracts, § 1430, at p. 380: "HN7 A bargain for the concealment or suppression of . . . evidence [*13] is of course illegal.") The agreement at issue in the present case is clearly of such a nature. In return for Firestone's promise to pay consideration, Big Four has agreed to suppress highly relevant evidence which, if revealed at trial, would be harmful to Firestone. Defendants do not nullify the agreement's insidious effect by attaching to it the seemingly innocuous label of "contract of indemnification."

[*14] The court in Petterson v. Superior Court (1974) 39 Cal.App.3d 267 [114 Cal.Rptr. 20], anticipating the potential for encouraging just such illegal bargains, declared unequivocally that discovery should be allowed in order to deter similar suppression of evidence. In Petterson, counsel for one claimant under a holographic will disclosed to the executor the opinion of a handwriting expert that the will was a forgery. Subsequently, when the executor's attorney sought to depose the expert, counsel for another claimant under the holographic will objected on the ground that he had hired the expert as a consultant, and did not propose to call him as a witness at trial.

The court rejected the assertion of work product privilege, and held that the privilege was waived with respect to the handwriting expert's opinion by virtue of the disclosure of the expert's observations and conclusions by the first heir's attorney to the executor's attorney. 4 In the course of [\[132\]](#) its analysis, the court stated, "If we were to declare that petitioners now may prevent real parties from taking [the expert's] [\[*838\]](#) deposition, we would be setting a precedent which eventually [\[*15\]](#) could lead to subtle but [\[45\]](#) deliberate attempts to suppress relevant evidence. The rule predicated on fairness articulated in the decisions is a shield to prevent a litigant from taking undue advantage of his adversary's industry and effort, not a sword to be used to thwart justice or to defeat the [salutary] objects of the Discovery Act." (39 Cal.App.3d at p. 273.)

The Petterson court's reasoning is instructive: although the work product rules are designed explicitly to protect a party's expense and industry in seeking out expert testimony, 5 no policy underlying the work product doctrine justifies defendants' conduct in the present case. If we were to hold otherwise, nothing would preclude a party in a multi-party case from in effect auctioning off a witness' testimony to the highest bidder. Although the present record does not disclose whether Big Four [\[*16\]](#) offered to retain Kurt as a witness if plaintiff bid more for his testimony than Firestone, we point out that in the absence of compelled disclosure such competitive bidding would remain a grim possibility. One of the principal purposes of discovery is to "make a trial less a game of blindman's buff and more a fair contest with the basic issues and facts disclosed to the fullest practicable extent." (Greyhound v. Superior Court (1961) 56 Cal.2d 355, 376 [15 Cal.Rptr. 90, 364 P.2d 266].) We will not sanction the "gamesmanship" involved in the suppression of evidence by permitting Big Four to withhold an expert report which would have been discoverable but for the payment of consideration by one of the parties to this litigation.

The agreement between Firestone and Big Four clearly indicates [\[*17\]](#) the very real potential for "subtle but deliberate attempts to suppress relevant evidence." The inevitable effect of the trial court's order would be to condone defendants' concealment of evidence, in direct contravention of this court's insistence that neither party to such an agreement should receive the aid of a court in effectuating such an illegal scheme. (See Tappan v. Albany Brewing Co. (1889) 80 Cal. 570, 572 [22 P. 257].) This court cannot place its imprimatur upon planned stratagems of purchased suppression of evidence. Because Big Four's withdrawal of Kurt directly flows from the illegal agreement to repress evidence, surely under section 2016, subdivision \(b\) "denial of discovery . . . [would] result in an injustice." We therefore must order full disclosure of Kurt's report to [\[*839\]](#) prevent Big Four and Firestone from reaping any untoward benefit from their attempted illegal agreement.

Let a peremptory writ of mandate issue as prayed.

Dissent by: RICHARDSON ▼

Dissent

RICHARDSON, J. I respectfully dissent. As the majority opinion explains, it is well established that work product protection must be afforded to an experts' reports and communications to an [\[*18\]](#) attorney employing him in preparation for trial at least until the expert has been designated as an actual trial witness. (See Mize v. Atchison, T. & S. F. Ry. Co. (1975) 46 Cal.App.3d 436, 449 [120 Cal.Rptr. 787]; Petterson v. Superior Court (1974) 39 Cal.App.3d 267, 271-272 [114 Cal.Rptr. 20]; Sanders v. Superior Court (1973) 34 Cal.App.3d 270, 278-279 [109 Cal.Rptr. 770]; Bolles v. Superior Court (1971) 15 Cal.App.3d 962, 963 [93 Cal.Rptr. 719]; Dow Chemical Co. v. Superior Court (1969) 2 Cal.App.3d 1, 9-10 [82 Cal.Rptr. 288]; Mack v. Superior Court (1968) 259 Cal.App.2d 7, 10-11 [66 Cal.Rptr. 280]; Scotsman Mfg. Co. v. Superior Court (1966) 242 Cal.App.2d 527, 529-532 [51 Cal.Rptr. 511]; Swartzman v. [133] Superior Court (1964) 231 Cal.App.2d 195, 202-203 [41 Cal.Rptr. 721].)

Under the foregoing rule, the Kurt report would have been protected from discovery by reason of Big Four's announcement, prior [\[46\]](#) to Kurt's scheduled deposition, that Kurt would not be called to testify. The majority holds, however, that Big Four forfeited its work product protection because it agreed with [*19] Firestone to withdraw Kurt as a trial witness in return for Firestone's promise of indemnification. The majority questions the legality of an agreement whereby one party "sells" his silence to another regarding potentially relevant evidence.

It does appear to be the general rule that "A bargain that has for its object or consideration the suppression of evidence . . . is illegal." (Rest., Contracts, § 554; see 6A Corbin, Contracts, § 1430, at p. 380; see also Tappan v. Albany Brewing Co. (1889) 80 Cal. 570 [22 P. 257].) It is not as clear, however, that actual "suppression" of evidence is involved here. The work product rules, by very definition, in effect sanction a "suppression" of an expert's report unless and until the decision is made to call the expert as a trial witness. Furthermore, assuming that the alleged agreement between Big Four and Firestone was illegal and unenforceable as between those parties, and that appropriate sanction might have been [*840] imposed, no compelling reason exists for our holding that the making of such an agreement resulted in a waiver by Big Four of its work product protection vis-a-vis the plaintiff. Certainly, no [*20] such waiver was intended by Big Four who, having engaged Kurt, should retain the right to decide for itself whether or not to call him as a witness. The record discloses that at the present time he will not be called. Accordingly, under the authorities cited above, the Kurt report remains conditionally protected from disclosure to plaintiff.

Under section 2016, subdivision \(b\), the Kurt report would be discoverable upon a showing of prejudice or injustice. Yet the trial court herein declined to enter such a finding of prejudice or injustice, possibly reflecting the fact that plaintiff had hired his own experts to investigate the accident. The underlying evidence, upon which Kurt's expert conclusions were reached, presumably is fully accessible to plaintiff's experts; at least it is not alleged that this evidence is not so available. If, in fact, Firestone's tire was defective and caused or contributed to the accident, no reason whatever appears in the record why plaintiff's experts cannot reach the same conclusion as a result of their independent efforts.

Subdivision \(g\) of section 2016 announces a policy of this state to prevent an attorney from taking undue advantage [*21] of his adversary's efforts, as well as to protect his adversary's privacy which, it must always be borne in mind, is for the overriding protection of the lawyer's client. "Under such a policy a party cannot substitute the wits of his adversary's expert for wits of his own in analyzing the case. [Citation.]" (Swartzman v. Superior Court, supra, 231 Cal.App.2d 195, 203.)

I would deny the writ.

Footnotes

1

The inadequacy of the record prevents our consideration of the effect of any alleged disclosure between Big Four and plaintiff.

2

Compare Evidence Code section 413: "In determining what inferences to draw from the evidence or facts in the case against a party, the trier of fact may consider, among other things, the party's failure to explain or to deny by his testimony such evidence or facts in the case against him, or his willful suppression of evidence relating thereto, if such be the case." As the court held in Breland v. Traylor Engineering & Mfg. Co. (1942) 52 Cal.App.2d 415, 426 [126 P.2d 455], "The rule of [present Evidence Code section 413] . . . is predicated on common sense, and public policy. The purpose of a trial is to arrive at the true facts. A trial is not a game where one counsel safely may sit back and refuse to produce evidence where in the nature of things his client is the only source from which that evidence may be secured. A defendant is not under a duty to produce testimony adverse to himself, but if he fails to produce evidence that would naturally have been produced he must take the risk that the trier of fact will infer, and properly so, that the evidence, had it been produced, would have been adverse." (Italics added.)

3 ¶

Compare Penal Code section 136, subdivision \(a\): "Every person who willfully and unlawfully prevents or dissuades any person who is or may become a witness, from attending upon any trial, proceeding, or inquiry, authorized by law, is guilty of a misdemeanor"; and section 136 1/2: "Every person who gives or offers or promises to give to any witness or person about to be called as a witness, any bribe upon any understanding or agreement that such person shall not attend upon any trial or other judicial proceeding, or every person who attempts by means of any offer of a bribe to dissuade any such person from attending upon any trial or other judicial proceeding, is guilty of a felony." Although Firestone dealt exclusively with Big Four in attempting to silence Kurt, the effect of Firestone's agreement with Big Four is certainly analogous to an agreement directly with Kurt that Kurt "not attend upon . . . trial."

4 ¶

In the present case we do not reach plaintiff's argument that Big Four waived any work product privilege through disclosure to Firestone.

5 ¶

Contrary to defendants' suggestion, our decision does not in any way prevent plaintiffs or defendants from arranging in advance jointly to engage and consult a single expert, to promote economy of litigation.

Content Type: Cases

Terms: 21 Cal3d 829

Narrow By: Sources: CA; Cases

Date and Time: Jan 15, 2018 07:24:59 p.m. EST

[About
LexisNexis®](#)

[Privacy
Policy](#)

Terms & Conditions

[Sign
Out](#)

Copyright ©
2018
LexisNexis. All rights reserved.

